

Blücher Scenario: Laichling, 21 April 1809. "Davout's Immortals"

This scenario is for two players, on a 24 x 16BW table (6' X 4' if using 1BW as 3").

Introduction

It is 21 April 1809 in the Danube valley, twelve days after Austria invaded Bavaria. The Franco-Bavarian forces have recovered from their initial surprise and blunted the impetus of the Austrian assault. The campaign is now in the balance. Battlefield intelligence on both sides has been limited by the close terrain and fast pace of events. Today, Napoleon believes he is chasing the main Austrian army back towards Landshut, while he has ordered Davout and Lefèbvre to mop up the remnants of enemy units stranded south of Regensburg. Davout, however, is about to discover that Napoleon has made a major miscalculation. Far from a few scattered battalions, Davout has come up against a strong Austrian position, prepared for a stubborn defence.

The Map

The river is impassable except at Schierling.

1 square equals 4BW.

The north side of the table is heavily wooded. The whole area was hilly but for game purposes hills are only shown where there are no woods. The top of the map is north.

MO

Both sides have 3 MO per turn.

Objectives

There are two objectives, both of which start the game under Austrian control. One objective should be placed in the village of Ober-Laichling. The second objective should be placed in the village of Ober-Sanding. If the French player controls both objectives at the end of an Austrian turn, the game ends immediately with a French victory.

Set Up Areas

The Austrians set up first.

IV Corps deploys anywhere in the yellow rectangle, facing west. Infantry may begin prepared. One unit may also garrison Unter-Laichling.

The French set up second. III Corps may set up anywhere within the blue rectangle. Lefebvre's Corps sets up anywhere within the black rectangle.

Both sides will be testing for reinforcements.

The game lasts for 25 turns. The French have the first turn.

Orders of Battle

Playing units are marked in bold.

Austrian reinforcements.

Austrian reinforcements on the day were haphazard, due, inter alia, to poor coordination between Rosenberg and Hohenzollern, the commander of III Corps, and to the erratic interventions of Archduke Charles. There are three Austrian reinforcement groups, each with its own reinforcement factor and location. Note it is entirely possible that Group C, in particular, will not arrive at all during the game.

Group A.

Destination: Any east table edge within the yellow deployment box.

Factor: 5

III Corps detachment: Division Field Marshal Lieutenant St. Julian

Brigade F Liechtenstein

J (IR #12) Veteran Infantry 6 a 10
J (IR#23) Veteran Infantry 6 10

Brigade von Bieber

J (IR #20) Veteran Infantry 6 a 10

Factor: 4

French Reserve division: Demont@

L (1st) Provisional Brigade 5 sk 9
L (2nd) Provisional Brigade 5 sk 9

Group B.

Destination: Any west table edge within the black deployment box.

Factor: 5

L (St German) Cuirassiers 7 Sh 15

*This unit represents the 5th and 6th battalions of the Archduke Charles Legion. The 1st battalion of the Legion had a good reputation and included rifle-armed light troops, but the rest of the Legion was less well-regarded and as they were only recently recruited, I have treated them as conscripts.

@ Demont's Reserve division was only formed on 21 March, from the 4th battalions of Davout's III Corps regiments. I have penalised these units for their recent creation. However they still have the skirmish trait and are not treated as conscripts.
